

Indigenous Governance Program

Addressing the specific needs of Indigenous organisations

The Indigenous Governance Program recognises the unique challenges faced by the boards of medium and large Indigenous organisations. The program is designed specifically for the directors, senior executives and leaders of Indigenous organisations. It will develop your skills, improve the quality of governance and lead to more effective performance for the whole organisation. Participating in the program will help your board to implement new practices and improve board effectiveness.

An experienced facilitator will involve the whole group in discussion, debate and resolutions tailored to your organisation.

Tailored workshops

Our In-Boardroom development services are cost-efficient, customised and a confidential way for your organisation to review good governance practices and to learn more about roles, duties, responsibilities and rights of directors.

The Indigenous Governance Program consists of six courses that can be delivered separately or combined. Courses are designed to be facilitated as interactive half-day workshops.

The courses are more suitable for large and medium Indigenous corporations as defined under the CATSI Act 2006.

Gain practical skills and knowledge

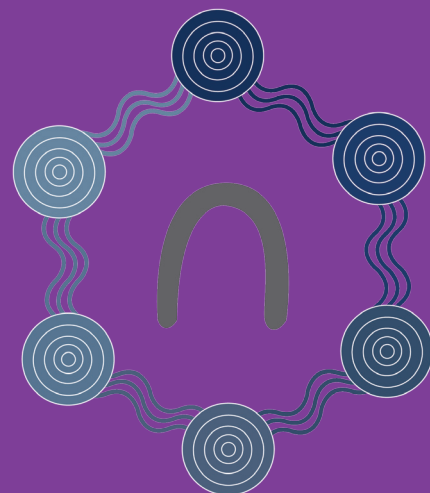

- Identify exactly what directors do and how they add value to the organisation
- Know your legal roles and responsibilities as a director
- Explore the procedures and processes that help achieve good governance
- Understand how the board contributes to strategic planning
- Learn how to read and interpret financial statements
- Know your own personal risk appetite and how this relates to your role as a director

About the Australian Institute of Company Directors

The Australian Institute of Company Directors has over 30 years of experience in developing director programs and is a world leader in director and board development.

Our programs are designed by directors for directors.

The Indigenous Governance Program has been designed and developed with the support of Indigenous Business Australia (IBA).

About our logo

The wavy lines represent knowledge being passed down or taught through the director courses. The large circles represent the six courses. The semicircle is a sitting-person symbol and represents the people participating in these courses. The lines and circles together form a perimeter around the person symbol, illustrating that the courses are a foundation for being a director.
